

parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Cook, was a most happy affair. The decorations were very fine, being composed of delicate gray green trailing vines and the more vivid green of the hollyhocks. The vines were carried up to the balcony of the dining room and all around the ceiling of the parlors with exceedingly fine effect. There was a profusion of flowers, roses, dahlias and other varieties, blanda of white lilies, and pink roses, depended from the ceiling to the corners of the dining table, and there was a handsome centerpiece, consisting of a bowl of white and pink roses, about which were laid upon the cloth sprays of maiden hair ferns and pink roses. All the lamps were shaded with pink. The Rev. Dr. Geo. B. Smith presided at the ceremony. The bride wore her traveling gown of blue. There were no bridesmaids. Her flowers were white roses. After congratulations were offered and refreshments were served, Mr. and Mrs. Cook departed for a trip to Detroit and the rest of the wedding party. As the newly wedded couple entered the carriage the Messrs. Sherman sprang to the horses heads and decorated the animals with yards of pure white ribbon, large bows of which were also fastened to the carriage. Their trunk was also found to be suitably decorated, and the departure was made in a shower of rice. About forty guests, relatives and intimate friends attended. There was a fine array of presents, some having been sent from Palmyra, N. Y., Kansas City, Mo., Chicago, Grand Haven and Iowa. The out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. E. Two Facts About a Ring.

An impressionable young gentleman in a certain country town recently met a charming girl whose grace and beauty took his heart by storm. While conversing with her he made a discovery which he fondly hoped would enable him to make at one brilliant stroke an elegant proof of his ready wit and his boundless affection. Glancing at a modest band of gold that encircled her fair finger, he remarked, "Sweet damsel, I pray you present me with the ring you wear, for I assure you it exactly resembles my love for you—it has no end."

"Indeed, sir," promptly replied the maiden; "you must excuse me if I keep the ring, for it exactly resembles also my love for you—it has no beginning."

Theories About Drowned Bodies.

It was a popular theory in days gone by that the body of a drowned man would float the ninth day, a notion which, Mr. Henderson informs us, prevails in the county of Durham. Sir Thomas Browne alludes to it as believed in his time, and in his "Pseudo-doxia Epidemica" there is a discussion on this fanciful notion. It was also believed that the spirits of those drowned at sea were doomed to wander for 100 years, owing to the rites of burial having never been properly bestowed upon their bodies. —Notes and Queries.

Plenty of Literature.

"Have you a Shakespeare in the house?" doubtfully inquired a young woman of her boarding landlady.

"Oh, yes," replied the good soul, with the air of possessing all of English literature worth having, "we've got the Shakespeare and the Byron both." —New York Times.

HOW I SAVED A FORTUNE.

A Lady's Experience With a Drunken Husband.

Mr. Publisher—I saw in your valuable paper last week what one of your subscribers had to tell about a "Cure for Drunkenness." My experience is different. I feel it my duty to the many wives and daughters whose loved ones are troubled with this disease to say how happy I now am. My husband inherited a nice farm and $10,000 in cash from an uncle who lived in Michigan, and I thought we would be happy and comfortable for the rest of our lives, but my husband thought he did not have to work any and took to drinking and I was afraid that I would have the common lot of a drunkard's wife, so I sent to the Golden Specific Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, $5 and got a package of Dr. Haines' medicine and gave it to my husband in his coffee every morning for breakfast. He did not know he was taking any medicine, and one day he said, "I feel as if I would like to go around to Jim's saloon any more, that whiskey did not taste good and he thought he would quit drinking entirely. That was two years ago, and I have never smelt whiskey on his breath since. Anyone can get the cure by writing the above firm or get the medicine for the price. If other people would do as I did there would not be any drunkards' wives in the world."
